Take a moment

Have you ever stopped to think of the work and planning involved in conducting a Numismatic Convention, whether large or small?

I would just like to bring to your attention one phase of the job, that of financing these various meetings. At practically every State, group of states, or National meeting of numismatists, you will find they have issued a program. In this program you will find many dealers' ads. These ads are paid for and go a long way toward financing the meeting. This is a good will gesture on the part of the dealer as the direct selling results from this type of advertising is questionable.

As a dealer I feel we should help in every way possible, financially and otherwise, to help promote these meetings as they stimulate interest and impart knowledge to the collector. I also believe that these dealers who advertise and contribute to these numismatic events, deserve your support.

Patronize the dealer who helps to support the hobby of numismatics. He is usually a better fellow anyway.

Original 'Two-Bit' Piece

HALF DOLLARS

HALF DOLLARS

Every man has heard the term "two bits," but do you know how it originated? Here is the story ---

While Colonists were carving out the wilderness in the New World, they had no time and often no authority to mint their own coins; so a great need for money arose. The output of small coins in the New World was far too meager to alleviate the shortage and so the Colonists being desperate, turned to drastic means.

Because of this shortage in North and South America, the practice of "cutting" started. The Spanish Colonial mints were striking their famous Piece of Eight which the Colonists used extensively and thus it was only natural that this was the coin that they chose to cut up.

They took the Spanish "Piece of Eight" which corresponds to our silver dollar and cut it into pie shaped sections which were used as small change. The term "Piece of Eight" means that it is composed of eight units (like ten dimes make a silver dollar.) Each unit was called a Real and was worth 12½ cents.

Rather than cut a Piece of Eight into eight pieces which produced a piece of silver too small for practical use, they cut it into halves and quarters. The quarters were nicknamed "two bits" because they were worth two Reals, and so our present quarter of a dollar, which is round, has retained this old nickname that was applied to the pie cuts.

Often these pie cuts were counter-stamped with the name of the country or island where it circulated. These pieces circulated in the 1780's and found their way to America and all over the world. Since the practice of cutting was stopped for the most part by 1825, these pieces naturally are rather scarce.

LAFAYETTE DOLLAR

In 1900 the so-called Lafayette Dollar was issued to commemorate the unveiling in Paris, during the French Exposition, of the equestrian statue erected by the youth of America to General Lafayette. About $50,000 of the funds needed were contributed by the pennies of the school children of America. It has the combined busts of Washington and Lafayette on the obverse and a representation of the statue by Truman H. Bartlett on the reverse.

Coinage of these pieces started on December 14, 1899, the 100th anniversary of the death of Washington. The first coin struck was sent to President McKinley, who forwarded it to the President of the French Republic. 50,026 pieces were struck and sold at $2.00 each. There is no record of any being returned to the Mint for remelting.

MacArthur

In 1947 the Philippine Government honored General Douglas MacArthur by issuing two Commemorative coins with his portrait on them - a peso (size of our silver dollar) and a 50¢ piece. Both are silver and were actually struck at the U. S. Mint. A limited issue that is now becoming scarce.

If the coins were the first to be struck, the Greeks were a stone's throw from the sea, taking their turtle sheller, the Aeginetans, and sprang Aeginetans about 1000 B.C.

The small city of Aegina was on the island Aegina, in the Gulf of Aegina, adjoining the Aegean Sea. This city was important to Greece, because it had supremacy of the sea. Athens had not yet come into her period of power and glory. Aegina was almost directly across the Aegean from Lydia, and evidently the Aeginetans looked across and caught the coinage idea.

Those first Greek coins were tear-drop in shape and very irregular in thickness. Probably it was because the Aeginetans had great love for the sea, that they chose that little rover, the turtle, for the design. They continued that design for nearly two hundred years. Their stater steadily improved in shape and appearance, and is known as the first coin to have a design on both sides. The reverse has a square divided into four, sometimes five, compartments. The square helped keep the flan from turning on the die with the strokes of the moneyer.

The earliest turtle coins have a smooth coat on the little sea turtle. There is a row of six tiny buttons down its back. Later, that turtle changed to a land tortoise with thirteen shingles for a roof. Those tortoises are familiar to the people of the Mediterranean's neighboring lands, and the Bible student is quick to recall its presense about the Red Sea district in the days of the Exodus when the Mosaic law forbid the tribes of Israel to eat them:

"These also shall be unclean unto you among the creeping things that creep upon the earth...the tortoise after her kind." (Lev. 11: 29)

Every collector of ancient coins today seeks to have a Greek coin with a little turtle wearing a buttoned coat, and the later one with a land tortoise and his thirteen-shingle roof.

SPANISH MILLED DOLLAR

"Pieces of Eight!" is a phrase which Robert Louis Stevenson makes the parrot in his immortal "Treasure Island" repeat from time to time with uncanny effect. But how many of his readers would be able to recognize the coin which appears at the head of this page as a "piece of eight"? These eight real pieces or "Pillar Dollars" of the Spanish possessions in the western hemisphere have another designation which for the students of American History is even more important. They are the "Spanish Milled Dollars" in which the Continental Congress promised to pay its obligations. It was the failure to pay these obligations which branded paper issues of the thirteen colonies as "Not worth a continental!"

The crowned pillars on the reverse of this coin refer to the Straits of Gibraltar which, because of the heights which guard the strait, were known to the ancients as the "pillars of Hercules." Reference to the Spanish claims on the New World is to be seen in the crown above the two hemispheres and the legend "Utraque Unum" - "The Two Made One."

To the left of the date, and between two rosettes, the letter M with a tiny O above it may be noted, establishing that this particular coin was struck in the mint at the city of Mexico. The fineness of the silver in these Spanish dollars, coupled with the circumstance that England had been sadly neglectful of the needs of her colonies for currency, made these the chief circulating medium for several decades preceding and following the Revolutionary war. They were coined in several South American cities, such as Lima and Potosi - but Mexico City was the most active of these early mints.

Authorities are in disagreement as to whether our American dollar sign ($) found its origin in the form of the pillar on the "Spanish Milled Dollar" depicted above or in the superimposed national letters U.S.
